Preface

BERKELEY, the seat of the University of California, is immediately north of Oakland. The city derives its name from George Berkeley, Bishop of Cloyne, Ireland, who came to America early in the eighteenth century for the purpose of establishing colleges. His devotion to the cause of learning made appropriate the bestowal of his name on the educational capital of the west, for it was he that penned the prophetic line, "Westward the course of Empire takes its way."

The University of California is the second largest in the world, having 6,300 regular students and a teaching staff of 500 professors and instructors. There is also an enrollment of several thousand at the Summer School each year. Holding a site which slopes gradually toward the hills in such a way as to present a commanding view of the Golden Gate, the bay and San Francisco, this ranks as one of the most picturesquely located American universities. The campus is a pleasant place of green lawns, old oak groves, forests of eucalyptus trees and botanical gardens—all a setting for an imposing array of buildings. The newer structures are of dazzling white granite, with red tile roof, forming part of a harmonious architectural plan which is being carried out as the institution develops.

In the center of the campus near the Sather Gate are California Hall, Benjamin Ide Wheeler Hall, the great University Library and the Boalt Hall of Law. Just to the east of this noble group rises the Sather Campanile, 302 feet high. A wonderful panoramic view is gained from its top, reached by elevator. Among the other notable structures are the Hearst Mining Building, Mechanics Building, Agriculture Hall, the new Hilgard Hall of the College of Agriculture, Hearst Hall and the Chemistry buildings.

The most distinctive feature of the University is the Greek Theatre, situated in a hollow of the hills at the eastern extremity of the campus. Planned on similar lines to those of the ancient theatre at Epidaudrus, it easily seats 9,000 people. Berkeley's climate is so equable that it is possible to hold out-door performances at any season of the year. It is the aspiration of every artist who visits the Pacific Coast to appear in the Greek Theatre, and Sarah Bernhardt, Margaret Anglin, Maud Adams, Nordica, Tetrazzini, Gadski, Schumann-Heink and Josef Hoffman are among those who have found inspiration here under the serene sky of California. During the summer months and while the University is in session Half-Hours of Music are given in the Greek Theatre on Sunday afternoons—concerts free to the public.

Berkeley, with a population of 65,000, is prominent among the pleasant places of residence which have made city life in California so attractive. This is essentially a community of artistic homes, and its streets and boulevards will delight the visitor. Claremont, Northbrae, Cragmont, Thousand Oaks, Arlington and Kensington Park are charming residential districts beautified with greenery. Above the city rise the Berkeley Hills, with many vantage points to allure leisurely pedestrians. Charter Hill, bearing near its crest the "Big C" of the collegians, is scaled by a winding trail, and beyond by an easy route one may walk to Grizzly Peak, highest point in this range, 1759 feet. In the Cragmont district are two pavilions upon the hillside which offer extended views out over the city and the bay. To the north may be seen steep Cerrito Hill.

The Hotel Shattuck, in the center of Berkeley, is a tourist hotel moderate in charges and excellent in its appointments and service. It is built in the characteristic Spanish architecture and faces the broadest thoroughfare in California, Shattuck Avenue.
